while Mr. Lehmann, who was chief officer

low Inpants Thavel in Russia.—An amezing system of carrying little children as passengers (says the Archiv für Eisenbuhnwesen) seems to have been in practice hitherto upon the Russian railways. The Russian Ministry of the Interior has just issued an ordinance to all railway officials prohibiting the further | packing of small children (literally "aucklings") in baskets, to the number of eight in a basket (I), and forwarding them to the foundling-houses in the great towns as hand-luggage." This abuse, says the Ministry in the circular, is no longer to be tolerated, since it involves a serious injury to the health of the children, and is also an attempt to evade the regulations for the carriage of passengers by rail. In Russis infants must be paid for. -Pail Mail Gazette.

THE Chinese mind is severely logical. A painter was ordered to paint the name on the barque Cape City on both sides of her bow, and on one side he duly produced in bold letters the legend CAPECITY Then he looked at what he had done, and saw that it was excellent, and noted carefully that the Y came nearest the stem of the ship. Full of this useful knowledge he passed round and began to paint the same legend on the other side. Remembering that the Y was forward and the C aft, he set energetically to work, and before long on the other bow of this justly celebrated barque appeared the striking legend YTICEPAC. He was as delighted with the result as the man who made a dozen pairs of new trousers all with a patch on the seat, because the sample pair given him was so adorned; and he is still wondering why the foreigner hurled opprobrious epithets at him, and ordered him to paint it out and do it again backwards. He consoles himself by quotations from the classics on the ineradicable ignorance, violence and unreasopableness of the barbarians from the outer sess .- N. C. Daily News

THE High Authorities at Canton report the result of a trienmial examination of the students in the Government School at Canton. The first examination of the kind took place in November, 1887, and was conducted by the then Tartar-General and the Vicercy Jul-lin, who sent up to Peking the names of six candidates selected for the proficency they had attained in their studies. A further examination of these candidates was held by the Tsung-li Yamen, and they were all raised to the position of Interpreters with the right of competing for a provincial degree, and granted appointments in the various Yamens in Examinations have since been held at intervals of three years, but the position of Interpreter in the Canton Yamens having become a purely nominal appointment, it was abolished on the recommendation of the late Tartar-General Ch'ang Shan, and any duties of the kind were to be performed by the most advanced of the students, whose services were to berewarded at the end of the year. On the present occasion the foreign teacher, Let-nt. was asked to select 14 of the students who had shown special diligence during their term of study and send up their names as candidates for examination. The examination consisted of translations from Chinese into English and from English into Chinese. The Chinese renderings of eight of the candidates were fairly good, and the English, according to the report of the teacher Lei-ni, contained no serious errors. Four of the candidates have been appointed Student Interpreters, and the other four have received minor degrees which will enable them to compete for the higher degree at the Provincial examination. The other students are either to be retained or not according to the proficiency they display at a subsequent test examination. - Peking

hai Mercury writes on the 11th inst. :- An exciting scene took place on the beach opposite the Beach Hotel yesterday. A gig belonging to a foreign firm, manned by natives, was lying about fifty yards from the shore, when two of the crew had a quarrel, and in their struggle fell overboard. The water was about breast high, and at times both would be under water. After fighting for about ten minutes the etrongest one of the two overpowered his opponent and held him under water for a considerable time, and would have no doubt held him there till life was extinct but fortunately for him there was a boat's crew from the Merlin on the beach cleaning out their boat; one of the sailors, seeing what was likely to happen. threw off his clothes, all but his trowsers, and rushed into the water and fished out the unfortunate Chinaman and dragged him on the beach. After rolling him for some time he showed signs of life and commenced to throw up the salt water and howl lustily. Several ladies witnessed the shair from the verandah of the hotel. One of these, a lady hailing from the Shetland Isles, rushed to the beach with a bottle of brandy in one hand and a tumbler in the other, and administered to each of the native pugilists a 'boatswain's The one who got the best of the battle soon recovered and walked off, but the other poor fellow was so weak that he had to be carried off by his friends. But the worst part of the tale is that poor 'Jack' who went to save the Chinaman, lost his clothes, for while he was acting the kind Samaritan the Chinese ran off with them. This was gratitude indeed ! But ! think what 'Jack' felt the most was to see John Chinaman 'getting the brandy while he was left out in the cold. However, a bold Captain was looking on, and seeing that the kind lady had forgotten the sailor, asked him to come into the hotel and have a drink, which was eagerly accepted, expect the next time 'Jack' goes to save a Chinaman he will have an eye to his clothes

ALLEGED THEFT OF COAL AT WANCHAL

Loung Hing, a shopman, was brought before Mr Wodehouse in the Police Court today on a charge of receiving a quantity of coal knowing the same to have been stolen. To Shing, clerk in the To Ki shop, Praya Central, said-About 7.30 a.m. on the 18th instant I was in a ricksha passing a godown at Wanchai which belongs to my master, when I saw over ten men removing coal from the godown through a window and taking it to the defendant's shop, which is quite close to the godown. The window has fron bars. A small boy was inside moving the coal out of the window, and it was being removed in wicker baskets. I got out of my ricksha and gave chase, and the men all ran into the defendant's shop with the coal. I afterwards went into the godown. There was a large quantity of Sydney coal there then, and I could not say how much had been taken away. On he same day l went to the defendant's shop with Inspector Swanston and found about ten tons of coal there, similar to that in the godown. When I passed the godown in the morning I saw about twelve arge baskets full of lump being actually removed. Each basket conained about 200 lbs.

The defendant said-I was left in charge of the shop by my master who is away in the country. The coal in the shop was bought by my master from the Wing Shan shop in the central district. > THE TEMPER OF JURIES. When the members of a 'panel' for the first time meet in court there is with them nearly always some odd feeling of curiosity as to the particular o upanions they may be likely to serve with on the same jury The clerk of the court may call into the box certain neighbours who are on snything but good terms with each other. On the other hand, for a 'perfect' jury they may be on too good terms with each other; one being, from constant intercourse, too much under the influence of another to be able to form a properly independent judgment of his own. As a rule, however, many jurymen go to their work with a pleasing degree of unbiassed indifference arising from hearty disgust consequent on being called up in to perform an unpleasant duty, resulting possibly in great waste of time and money. The existence, too, of such indifference very often almost humorously proved in the choice of a foreman, it being well known that the 'president of the box' is frequently chosen simply from the fact that he happens to be seated nearest to the judge. However, it by no means follows that a specially inattentive jury is necessarily a specially stupid jury. Still such a ju y is far from being welcome to a counsel with bad' case, as it is probable all trouble of thinking will be left to the judge; the jurors comfortably making up 'heir minds to give no attention to the matter in hand until his lordship sums up, and then to implicitly follow his direction. The attentive jury, however, more particularly if a not over-brilliant common jury, is peculiarly liable, so to speak, to be 'imposed' upon by a smart counsel. Widely opened ears are of course more readily capable of accepting a wholesome supply of small flattery than those which are partially closed by inattention. The really smart counsel is only too pleased with the 'highly intelligent apart. I could see the traces of coal having juryman who takes copious notes, possibly as unintelligible to himself as to others, and who is not happy until he has asked his brace of questions. In answering such ques tions, if the learned counsel cannot find some way or other of tickling the vanity of the 'highly intelligent,' ho is totally unworthy (if in a criminal case) of having his portrait figure in the Police News or (if in a civil cause) of receiving the gratifying thanks of a speculative solicitor. As to the 'delicate handling' of juries by eminent counsel, there is no doubt whatever about its ultimate influence on the verdict. On hill and prairie, field and lawn Their deny oyes upturning, The flowers still watch from reddening Till western skies are burning.

Alas I each hour of daylight tells A tale of shame so crushing That some turn white as sea-bloached ahella, And some are always bluehing.

But when the patient stars look down On all their light discovers, The traitor's smile, the murdorer's frown, The lips of lying lovers,

They try to shut their saddening eyes, And in the vain endeavor We see them twinkling in the skies, And so they wink forever. -O. W. Holmes.

TWO LOVES.

I wonder if a certain lane. . So happily is faring As when my first love, Ellen Jane. There took her daily airing.

My lollipops I shared with her, And, daintiest of missos. For every sweet, without demur, She paid me off in kisson.

My latest love is Eleanor, The Jane is quite derided And, though I still divide with her, My pay is undecided.

I on her shrine am showering. Her smiles with sunshine till the air: But ah! too oft she's lewering.
